week, and wants to be taken out to a restaurant the other four. I doubt that there's an iron in our home. Thanks for reminding me that some women still keep house.—MR. X (Akron, Ohio)

Dear Ann: Anyone who irons bed sheets in this day and age is sick. The only thing that matters is whether or not they are laundered. I can't imagine a duller way to kill time than to stand and iron sheets that will be wrinkled in five minutes anyway. You goofed, Ann. I recommend 10 lashes with a knotted bedsheet.—JUNE BUG (Fairbanks, Alaska)

Dear Ann: For once in your life you stuck up for the men. I almost swallowed my pipe when you told the woman to iron the sheet if it made her old man happy. You ain't such a bad tomato after all.—BUSTER (Minneapolis)

Dear Ann: It burns me up to think of you—comfortably ensconced in your ivory tower suggesting that women the world over be further subjected to the unreasonable demands of their husbands. Iron bed sheets yet! And how many bed sheets have YOU ironed in your life, Dearie? — FLO L. (Utica, N. Y.)

Dear Utica: If all the bed sheets I have ironed in my life were tied end to end, they'd reach from me to you.—ANN LANDERS (Chicago)
